The Grand Council of Guardians (GCG) is an organization made up of African American's in law enforcement, both uniformed and civilian. The council was formed in 1974 with the mission of delivering effective service to the community, to eliminate injustice, and maintain high standards of integrity, honor and courtesy.

Several times a year, each organization under the GCG umbrella, honors an individual that has proven to be an asset to their community and/or to their department. On April 30, 2014, the 8th Annual Women's History Month Awards Celebration took place at the Brooklyn Supreme Ceremonial Court. The NYS Parole Guardians honored Manhattan Senior Parole Officer Deborah Watkins for being an asset to the department when it comes to handling matters on Rikers Island and/or within New York City Corrections.
