

Parole Officer Graduation Held At DOCCS' Albany Training Academy

A group of 40 men and women are now parole officers following a graduation ceremony, June 6th, at the DOCCS Training Academy in Albany. The graduation marked the end of eight weeks of training and will allow the graduates to head to three weeks of on the job training in the field. The ceremony, which was attended by members of the DOCCS Central Office Executive Team and family and friends, also recognized some of the graduating classes top members whom received several awards. Acting Deputy Commissioner for Community Supervision, Steven Claudio, delivered remarks to the graduates congratulating them and urging them to stay committed to the DOCCS mission statement. Keynote speaker, DOCCS Acting Commissioner Anthony J. Annucci, noted that while the job of a parole officer is challenging, it is also rewarding, and graduates should strive to achieve a standard of excellence in the performance of their duties. Congratulations to all the graduates!
