BEACON - State police in Wappinger charged four women after they allegedly attempted to bring contraband into the Fishkill Correctional Facility.

All four women were charged with misdemeanor promoting prison contraband after state police were notified by the New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision Office of Special Investigations Saturday.

Two of the women were also charged with misdemeanor unlawful possession of marijuana.

Two women were from Brooklyn. The others were from the Town of Utica and Town of Woodbury. The Journal does not typically name those charged with misdemeanors.

All four were released on their own recognizance and issued appearance tickets, returnable to the Town of Fishkill Court.
